We Understand Your Needs

Textiles play an essential part in addressing man's fundamental necessities. We frequently think of textiles as merely the garments we wear. The bulk of textiles is manufactured and consumed in the garment business.

Textiles have a significant role in many facets of life, from conception to death. Textile usage may be traced back approximately 8500 years. Textile technology developments in other sectors are not as often appreciated as in the garment industry. The following paragraphs explain some of the critical functions textiles play in other sectors.
